TOKYO, July 12 (NYT).-The resignation of Deputy Premier Takeo Miki today, in the wake of the Liberal Democratic party's setback in last Sunday's upper house election, touched off intense speculation over the political future of Premier Kakuei

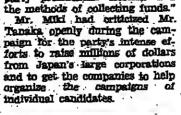

Mr. Tanaka's post as president of the Liberal Democrats and thus as premier appeared to bein no immediate danger, at least before nex summer's scheduled party presidential election.

But Mr. Miki's surprise move, to protest what he felt were heavy-handed tactics during the electoral campaign, cast doubt on how effectively Mr. Tanaka could continue to govern

Nixon Ex-Aide to Appeal

Ehrlichman, 3 Others Guilty in Ellsberg Case

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, July 12 (IHT) —A U.S. District Court jury to-cay found former top presidential aide John Ehrlichman and three co-defendants guilty of conspir-acy in the September, 1971, bur-glary at the office of Daniel Elisberg's former psychiatrist.

Mr. Ehrlichman, who had been No. 3 man on the White House staff as President Nixon's domestic-affairs adviser, also was convicted of one count of lying to the FBI and two counts of lying to a grand jury during investigations of the Ellsberg case hreak-in . He was found not guilty on only one of the counts against him—a charge that he lied to the grand jury about who had possession of the files of the "plumbers," the White House investigative unit that carried out the burglary. Judge Gerhard Gesell scheduled July 31 for the sentencing of Mr. Ehrlichman and his codefendants, convicted Watergate burglars Gordon Liddy, Bernard Barker and Engenio Martinez, Mr. Ehrlichman, 49, who held the highest government post of any of the persons convicted to date in the Watergate scandal, faces up to 25 years in prison and a $40.000 fine. The three others face up to 10 years in prison and $10.000 fines.

The jury announced its verdict after 5 1/2 hours of deliberation.

Nixon Called

Confident on Vote in House

By Carroll Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON, July 12 (WP). President Nixon believes that, while the House Judiciary Committee may vote a bill of impeachment, the full House will not do so and thus will not "pass the buck" to the Senate, Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said

Mr. Ziegler made the comment shortly before Mr. Nixon went late in the day to his California home for a two-week stay and to prepare what is described as a "major" address on the economy. The comment also was made before the conviction of John Ehrlichman in the Ellsberg Instead of being depressed by publication yesterday of the mass of material relating to the imneachment proceeding, the President remains confident that he will emerge the victor when the House votes, Mr. Ziegler said. "The President recognizes that this is a political process and he would not he surprised hy a committee vote against him," Mr. Ziegler said. "He does feel strongly that the House will not rote impeachment." Earlier, James St. Clair was quoted as predicting that the House committee, composed of 21 Democrats and 17 Republicans. would vote for impeachment but that the full House would not.

St. Clair Denies It Later, Mr. St. Clair denied having made a prediction about the House committee, declaring that it would be "quite presumptuous of me to make up the committee's mind for it."

Mr. Ziegler, who has issued daily blasts this week against the Judiciary Committee, said that the evidence it has published "certainly helps the President" in the fight against impeachment. "There's no bombshell in there, there's nothing new there," the press secretary said of the nearly 4,000 pages of Judiciary Committee material, which almost all other observers have regarded as damaging to the President. "What it does show is how nartisan the leaks were from the Drinans, the Conyers, the Brookses, the Waldies," Mr. Ziegler said. French Make 'Disconnection,' Sentencing 30 in Heroin Ring

MARSKILLES, July 12 (UPI), Joseph Marro, a former Mar-Thirty French and Corsican sellies bar-owner, who is still heroin traffickers, including 12 women, today were given prison sentences ranging from six months to 18 years.

Judge Jean-Pierre Bezombes sentenced the members of the group, which, prosecutors said, had funneled a ton of heroin to tha United States.

Some of the accused had been in custody for as much as two years, since a drive assisted by U.S. agents had rounded up most the gang's leaders and hundreds of less important suspects. The campaign is said to have severed the ring's distribution lines and clandestine heroinprocessing laboratories were closed in the Marseilles area.

The "French disconnection" began after a French singer and pianist, Edmond Taillet, 42, who said he carried drugs into the United States in a guitar, was arrested in New York and gave police the names of accomplices.

Taillet, now free in the United States after serving a shortened sentence there, got 16 years today. The man named as the ringleader, Jean-Baptiste Croce, 52, a yacht-owning Corsican, was sentenced to 18 years, as was

Israel Ties Peace Talks Role To Getting U.S.-Pledged Arms

TEL AVIV. July 12 (UPI).-Defense Minister Shimon Peres said today that the Arabs are preparing for renewed war, pos-sibly within a year, and that Israel cannot proceed with peace talks unless the United States gives it weapons to counter the Arab military buildup.

There are three critical deadlines for the possibility of war, although it might not necessarily break out." Mr. Peres said in an nterview with the newspaper

"First the development of Arah terror and Israeli counteraction. Second, I see the space of half a year to a year if it turns out that despite all the bopes, political negotiations do not prove sucsessful. If that is so, the Arabs certainly Intend to renew the military confrontation," Mr. Peres

"Third, and this is the most worrying time frame when Arah might reaches a zenith that tempts their levelbeadedness," he

Both the Egyptians and Syrians are stepping up their military preparations, he said, accelerating field training and incorporating new aircraft into their strike

Under these circumstances, Mr. Peres said, Israel's participation in peace talks with the Arabs depends on getting the military aid promised by the United States. Late last year, the United States authorized $2.2 million in aid to Israel. This year, President Nixon changed from loan to grant status $1.5 million of the debt for U.S. military assistance. Last month, during the President's visit to Jerusalem, Israeli officials explained in a series of memorandums that their country would need about $1.5 million in military sales credits in each of the next four years and grants and credits of $500 million a year to help meet economic requirements. A joint statement issued before the President left did not mention figures or a time span but made it clear the administration would support the requests.

"It is clear to us," Mr. Peres said, "that Israel cannot go to further negociations before the given us to maintain the balance [U.S.] promissory notes that were in the Middle East and to strengthen Israel's might are redeemed in fact." As evidence that Egypt is preparing for the possibility of renewed war, Mr. Peres cited appeals by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat for more military aid from the Soviet Union and the closing of ranks between Cairo and the Palestinian guerrilla movement, Mr. Peres said Syrian, Jordanian and Iraqi troops that fought on the Golan Heights front in October "have started to become richer in arms and soldiers than the southern front -and as always, more extreme in their hostility."

In another interview, on Armed Forces Radio, Information Minister Aharon Yariv said Israel might be willing to negotiate peace with the Palestine Libera-Organization, the overall guerrilla grouping, but only if the PLO explicitly rejected the idea of destroying the state of Israel and ceased attacks on it.

Hint on Ending Feud

BEIRUT, July 12 (AP' .-Palestinian guerrillas gave a strong hint today that they might he willing to end their feud with King Hussein of Jordan.

The indication was made in a statement by Zuheir Mohsen, the leader of the Syria-backed al-Saiga guerrilla group and head of the military department of the PLO.

"If we find it in the interest make peace with the Jordanian regime, or if Jordan recognizes our rights and meets our demands, then nothing would prevent a reconciliation," Mr. Mohsen said.

His statement published by the leftist Beirut newspaper As Safir, was the first reconciliatory declaration by a senior guerrilia leader since King Hussein drove the guerrillas out of Jordan in a 1970 civil war.

Soviet Paper Says Chinese Build Forces

MOSCOW, July 12 (AP:-Red Star, the newspaper of the Soviet Defense Ministry, charged today the Maoists are militarizing all phases of Chinese public life, supposedly to counter a threat from the Russians.

A major article in the newspaper reviewed tensions between doscow and Peking, which have heen increasing since the early 1960s, and concluded:

The Maoists are concentrating their main efforts on a struggle against the Soviet Union. Underscoring their extreme anti-Sovietism, the politicians and ideologists of Peking have fahricated and are spreading in their country and throughout the world the monstrous lie of the menace from the north and a supposed possible sudden attack of the U.S.S.R. on the Chinese People's

Red Star added, "In order to increase tension co the border with our country, the Maoist have arranged thousands of small and large provocations and even military clashes with Soviet border guards."

The Chinese, the paper said, "are building up their navy in the area of the South China Sea and are pursuing a policy of expanslon in south and southeast Asia. Red Star made no mention of the March 14 capture of a Soviet border-patrol helicopter by the Chinese. Its three crew members have since been held by the Chinese under threat of trial.

Neither was there mention of a new round of border talks expected with the return to Peking June 25 of Soviet negotlator Leonid livichev after a year's

U.S. Inmates Protesting in Mexican Jails

Hunger Strike Staged By 112 in Drug Cases

MEXICO CITY, July 12 (NYT), -A group of 112 young Americans in jail in Mexico City on charges of drug trafficking are on a hunger strike to protest their treatment by the Mexican government and the U.S. authorities here.

The main complaint of the Americans is that the Mexican and U.S. governments "conspire" to give them excessively tough sentences as "an example" to other potential traffickers.

The hunger strike, which began Tuesday afternoon, was suspended Wednesday night during negotiations with Mexican officials, but it was resumed again yesterday. So far there is no word on how long the prisoners intend to strike or whether any are suffering ill effects from not eating.

72 Men, 40 Women

Most of the Americans involved -72 men at Lecumberri jeil and 40 women at Los Reyes penitentiary—were arrested at Mexico City airport while trying to ship cocaine from South America into the United States.

During a meeting with U.S. Consul General Peter Peterson in Lecumberri Tuesday, numerous prisoners accused U.S. authorities of pressuring Mexico to charge traffickers with "import-ing" rather than "transporting" Importation of illegal drugs carries an averaga seven-year sentence, while transportation usually brings only a threeyear term.

"We are satisfied that there are laws against the importation and transportation of drugs in Mexico," Mr. Peterson said in an interview. "But whether the detainees are guilty or innocent of importation or transportation is a legal question which can only be decided by a Mexican court."

A joint U.S.-Mexican antidrug campaign, launched in 1970, has resulted in the seizure of large quantities of marijuans and cocaine and the arrest of hundreds of Mexicans and foreigners, Of 510 Americans in jail in Mexico on July 1, 425 were there on drug-related charges,

S. Korea Seeks 20-Year Terms For 2 Japanese

SEOUL, July 12 (UPI).—The military prosecution today de-manded 20-year prison terms for two Japanese accused of taking part in a plot to overthrow the government and set up a Communist regime.

A spokesman said the prosecution demanded the sentences for Masaki Tachikawa, 28, and Yoshiharu Hayakawa, 37, at a court-martial in Seoul

The prosecution said the Japanese deserved the death penalty but the lighter sentences were sought because the two were foreigners and were repentant. They were arrested with 58 Koreans in April for alleged involvement in a student-led riot against the government.

Greece Sentences 27 as Plotters

IOANNINA, Greece, July 12 (Reuters). - Twenty-seven persons, charged with forming a pro-Communist organization whose aim was the overthrow of the Greek government, were sentenced to prison terms ranging from five months to 10 years by special court-martial today. The defendants, most of them students, were accused of founding the organization on orders from the outlawed Greek Com-

Altogether, -Two convicts continued today to hold seven hostages at gunpoint in a cellblock of the U.S. District Courthouse here while officials sought to negotiate a way out of the impasse. The incident forced a change in venue for the trial of the White House "plumbers," in which John Ehr-

An official taking part in the negotiations declined to say if any progress had been made. He said that publicity might ruin the talks. Hundreds of heavily armed policemen ringed the courthouse.

The hostages wer seized yesterday afternoon by Robert Jones, 24, and Frank Gorham, 25, who are demanding a plane to take them out of the country. Both convicts face long prison terms on a variety of convictions. A spokesman for the FBI con-firmed that the agency had an executive-type jet in readiness as part of its contingency planning. The case grew out of an attempt to develop a psychological profile of Mr. Elisberg after the former employee of the Defense Department had leaked to newe

During the summer of 1971, the White House felt that it needed such a profile to discredit Mr. Ellsberg. Mr. Ehrlichman ap-proved a "covert operation" to get the information from the files of Mr. Ellsberg's former psychiatrist, Dr. Lewis Fielding. WASHINGTON, July 12 (WP). From a pay raise for Gordon Liddy to searching the Navajo reservation for "Republican converts," no information about the 1972 campaign was so trivial that it failed to reach White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman, a set of political memorandums released yesterday indi-

As a result, Mr. Strachan reported:

"The attorney general discussed with John Dean the need to develop a political intelligence capability. Sandwedge has been scrapped. Instead, Gordon Liddy, who has been working with [Egil] Bud Krogh, will become general counsel to the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, effective Dec. 6, 1971. He will handle political intelligence as well as legal matters. Liddy will also work with Dean on the 'onlitical enemies' project."

The First Evidence

The paragraph, tucked into the middle of a five-page report to Mr. Haldeman on "political matters," represents the House Judiciary Committee's first piece of evidence concerning the Watergate scandal. The Strachan memo and three others that followed were disclosed in the committee's account of the events leading up to the June 17, 1972, hreak-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters at Watergate.

The committee, which is investigating whether President Nixon should be impeached because of the Watergate and other scandals, yesterday made public the memos in a seven-volume "Statement of Information." The volumes present without conclusions or comments a compendium of the committee's basic Watergate documentary evidence.

The documents set out familiar cpisodes and allegations from Attorney General John Mitchell's purported approval of the hreakin to the hugging of about 200 conversations and the discovery of the espionage at the Watergate office building here.

'Our Political Types'

The Strachan memos, however, have not been made public. They trace not only Liddy's hiring, but also the origins of the $350,000 cash fund that was eventually diverted to help pay for the defense of the Watergate hurglars at their first trial. But they are significant for what they tell of the White House's careful atten-

The Nixon administration had imposed a nationwide freeze on salaries and the White House had ruled that no one assigned to the re-election committee should get a higher salary than he had drawn on the White House staff. Mr. Strachan reported the problem in his next memo on 'political matters" to Mr. Haldeman on Dec. 6, 1971. Liddy was supposed to start working at the campaign committee that day, but he had been expecting a raise when he was working under Krogh as one of the plumb-

Had Mr. Haldeman stuck to the rule, perhaps there would have been no Watergate.

"Liddy is paid $26,000 by the domestic council," Mr. Strachan reported, adding that Krogh had been pressing for a higher salary for him, but that "nothing had happened during the freeze." Mr. Strachan said both Dean and Krogh felt Liddy ought to get $30,000 at the re-election committee "because of his age [41], experience and prior sacrifice." Underneath the entry were the options Mr. Strachan drafted for

NEW YORK, July 12 (AP). Pollster Louis Harris said that a nationwide survey of 873 persons shows that 23 per cent of Republicans and independents picked Vice-President Ford as their first choice for the 1976 Republi-can presidential nomination. Mr. Harris said yesterday that in the poll, taken last month, Mr. Ford gained 2 per ceot over a survey taken three months ago. Second choice in the June sampling was Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, with 15 per cent, followed by former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, with 10 per cent. Mr. Strachan followed up the ed in a Feb. 6, 1972, exchange between Mr. Haldeman and Mr. Strachen. Mr. Haldeman, Maurice Stans, former Nixon campaien finance chairman, and others have testified that the fund was commandeered by the White House out of surplus funds from the 1968 campaign to pay for the costs of "special private polling" that might need to be conducted.

The Strachan memos suggest that the secret fund was to be used for anything but polling. The cash account grew out of a report to Mr. Haldemen about more than $900,000 that Mr. Nixon's personal attorney and chief hehind-the-scenes fund-raiser, Herbert Kalmbach, had ou hand in cash and in checking accounts.

Mr. Strechan recommended that Mr. Kalmbach retain control of just the $230,000 in "green" that he had. At the same time, Mr. Strachan pointed out that Stans is opposed to paying for any polls other than through a correct committee; the risk of using green is just too high." As a result, Mr. Strachen recommended that "any polling would be paid for by regular Nixon finance committees.

'Hold for Us'

Mr. Haldeman approved the recommendation with a note that the cash fund be made larger. Make it 350 green hold for us. the White House chief of staff wrote on the memo.

Ten days later, on Feb. 16, 1972, Mr. Strachan reported back: "Kalmbach cleared with the attorney general and Stans the 350 in green under your unquestioned personal control. A separate box of green is being developed for

It was campaign "green" that peid for the Watergate break-in. The "350 in green" remained largely intact until the winter of 1972-73 when, the Watergate grand jury has charged, Mr. Haldeman approved its use "for the henefit of the defendants" at the original Watergate trial,

The World Population

The United Nations world population conference, which will open in Bucharest August 19, should help to dispel some simplistic notions about the "population problem." The problem, to be sure, is real. The ancient, although cruel balance of nature is upset. Advances in public health and medicine have reduced infant mortality and extended man's life span. More people are born into the world than leave it. The present world population of 3.7 hillion could double by the end of this century. The rate of increase is twice as fast in the developing countries, threatening their prospects for economic end social progress by wiping out what improvements in the standard of living there are.

One simple notion has it that poor people have many children because they don't know any better. Give them the pill, the coil or the loop, aloog with the education to use these devices, and they will happily comply with the kind of "family planning" Westerners think best for them. This condescending attitude has not worked very well. The most important lesson of 10 years of family planning programs in Africa, Asia and Latin America seems to be that poor people are not stupid. They respond quite rationally to their economic circumstances. which dictate that they have many children to help ohtain food and provide for them in old age. The hirth rate, it has been shown, falls when the standard of living rises—when the struggle for survival becomes less desperate and the fear of dying alone and in abject poverty fades. Some representatives of developing nations argue, therefore, that family planning programs are futile and that "economic development is the best pill." But that, too, is simplistic. It is true, you can't have effective birth control without economic development. But neither can you have effective economic development without some birth control.

The Bucharest conference, which is expected to be the largest gathering ever to convene under the auspices of the United Nations, will therefore concern itself with a great deal more than birth control. Rapid population growth is not the only population problem. Some underpopulated countries, in fact, cling to the dubious helief that they must increase their populations to protect their territory, swell their labor forces and enlarge their domestic market. Others are more concerned about migrant workers (14 million southern Europeans and North Africans are now working in foreign countries) and rapid urbanization than they are about the baby boom. Population problems and policies have a direct bearing on world resources, the environment and the livability of the world's growing cities.

The conference, directed hy Antonio Carrillo-Flogvduj, former finance and foreign minister of Mexico, seems to have been well prepared at numerous international meetings. Experts have drafted a proposed world population "plan of action" which outlines principles, policies and goals and lays the groundwork for increased international cooperation. The deliberations in the capital of the socialist republic of Romania promise to be well attended and will be followed around the world. Following the UN conference on the Human Environment in Stockholm two years ago and preceding the conference on human settlements in Vancouver two years hence, the conference is part of the UN's global effort to come to terms with the immense and frightening changes on this planet.

Farewell to Dolce Vita?

There will not be much aoice vita for anyone in Italy this year, with the new auster-My measures brought on by the current fiscal crisis-although it is the Flat rather than the Ferrari set that usually is hit hardest in such matters. In our proper puritanical hearts, we Americans have long found both dolce vita and dolce far niente suspect, even as we enjoyed them with onviction that this was the real reason why Venice was sinking and the coastal pines were dying. Italy has a long hedonistic tradition that goes back to Nero's musical divertissement.

The real reasons for Italy's serious troubles, from economic to environmental, are deeply rooted in the country's politics, sociology and financial structure. Austerity measures will only scratch the surface. There is a long, hard pull ahead. Meanwhile, some of the most glaring symptoms will be a proliferation of "Chiuso" signs closing the museums that are synonymous with Western culture and beauty, as funds decrease for the already pitifully inadequate curatorial staffs. It would solve no basic problems, but perhaps personnel could be augmented by Italy's international art students, who could at least keep the doors open while writing their strong feelings of gulit and with the inner doctoral dissertations; repair and maintenance work might be carried out by international professional volunteers. Political Prisoners in Greece

In October last year, commenting on the result of the general election in Turkey, we expressed the hope that the Turkish political parties would swiftly agree to vote a general amnesty for political prisoners, of whom there were reckoned to be 5,700; and we pointed out that such an amnesty had recently been granted by the Greek regime, in other respects so much less democratic.

In retrospect, the reference to Greece in this context seems to have been unfortunate. A month later the tanks returned to the streets of Athens to suppress a student revolt, and a few days after that President Papadopoulos himself was overthrown in a new military coup, engineered by Brigadier Demetrios Ioannidis, the head of the military police. It was clear that the military police and other authoritarian circles within the armed forces drew a direct connection between the very cautious liberalization of the Papadopoulos regime and the reappearance of disorder on the Athens streets. In any case they regarded the release of political prisoners as an implied snub to themselves which they were anxious to reverse.

Portugal's Morning After

Portugal's bloodless revolution 11 weeks ago, which overthrew nearly 50 years of right-wing dictatorship, is only now facing its first serious complications. Some will say it is surprising they have not come earlier. From the first surprising events on April 25, there has been something improbable and bizarre about the régime which took over the country. The dapper, monocled Gen. Spinols, who had won fame as a commander in Africa fighting against the rebels who are now to be placated, always seemed an unlikely figurehead for a movement aiming to lead Portugal and the African territories to freedom. In his book about Africa he certainly did not propose that Mozamhique, Angola and Bissau should achieve immediate independence. Yet that is now what is being demanded.

On the home front, President Spinola had no temperamental sympathy with the Socialists and two Communists who made up the greater part of the first civilian cabinet which he and the armed forces junta appointed. That cabinet has now been dismissed. Another, more military, will replace it. It too may contain elements alien to Gen. Spinoia. But he has nonetheless shown who, for the moment, is boss.

The key to the situation, no doubt, lies in the exact composition and political alignments of the group of relatively junior officers from the armed services who are the real power in the country. It was they who made the revolution and installed Gen. Spinola as President, Gen. Spinola has widespread popular support among the population in general. To that extent, he, no coubt, still has some power-base or his own: but he does not seem to have been able to use it to prevent the cabinet break-up. The worst development now would be a military government which was resisted by the Com-

Woodrow Wilson and Nixon

By James Reston

WASHINGTON-In his first inaugural address. Woodrow Wilson said that "the firm basis of government is justice, not pity," and he appealed to "every man's conscience and vision of the right." This did not prove to be a very contagious sugges-tion, but Wilson said some things that day that are relevant to our present political and public con-

"The nation has been deeply stirred," he said, "stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instru-ment of evil .. We know our task to be no mere task of politics hot a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we he indeed their spokesmen and interpreters. whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectifled will to choose our high course

Wilson's Concern

Wilson was concerned that the people and the Congress, con-fronted by the difficult and am-biguous problems of that day, should approach their duty from the interests of the nation as a whole and of the future.

"It is inconcetvable" he said "that we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable that we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are, or in blind haste... Men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try?"

Compare this with the rhetoric and arguments of the White House, the Congress, and the country today. Again the na-tion has been confronted by "the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instru-ment of evil." The evidence is clear before us on the White House tapes, but the reaction is quite different. It is no longer "inconcelvable" that we should seek "justice" without knowledge of the "facts" -The White House is refusing to produce the facts and telling the Supreme Court to stay out of the case, and refusing to say even whether it will abide by the judgment of the highest court of the

It is no longer "inconceivable" that this great constitutional crists of today should be approached in partisan terms: The White House legal strategy is to provoke a partisan split and thereby, if successful, assure enough votes to avoid conviction of the President on the evidence.

Politics, Principles

The Congress is not exactly motivated these days by "every man's conscience and vision of the right," but is seething with partisan sentiments, and the pubic opinion polls reflect similar confusion between politics and

The latest Gallup poll, for example, reports that "despite the revelations of recent months regarding the Watergate scandal, the American people remain closely divided on the issue of whether Watergate is a "serious matter," or "just politics—the kind of thing both parties engage in. -48 per cent saying it is "serious" and 43 per cent dismissing it as "just politics."

Gallup also reports, despite the continuing confusion over the facts that "a majority of Americans, 53 per cent, now believe mass media-newspapers, television and radio-are providing 'too much' coverage of Water-

This is the most interesting and probabily the most decisive question about the impeachment process: Whether the people and the Congress want the disturbing facts, or whether they are bored and frightened by the facts and want to evade them. The evidence seems to be that a very large percentage of the people are almost stunned by the facts they already have and that the daily disclosures of wrongdoing, even when expressed in locker room language in the President's own voice, no longer produce a comparable response. In the light few days, the White House has gone into the Supreme . Court and argued that the President alone should decide what evidence ought to be made availshie, even evidence of criminal

Also the House Judiciary Committee has issued its recordings of the President's White House conversations, which differ from the President's versions of the same tapes and demonstrate that somebody eliminated critical information and even changed words and meanings in the original White House presentation of the "facts"

On May 3, the White House Deputy Press Secretary, Gerald L. Warren, announced that the White House transcripts represented "the complete story as it relates to the President and

A Statement

But the Judiciary Committee version includes one statement eliminated by the White House, in which the President, eliminating his gutter language, says: "I want you all to stonewall it, let them (his aides) plead the Fifth Amendment cover-up or anything else, if it'll save the plan. That's the whole point.."

Threshold Questions

These, then, are the threshold questions: How is the mountain of evidence to be judged? On Nixon's terms or the court's? With all the facts or without On the whole shoody record of misconduct or on the narrow ground of some clear violation of criminal law? On the basis of justice, conscience, and the right, as Woodrow Wil-son proposed that we should approach our problems, or on the is quite a performance, but it wasn't emittly what Woodrow.

One would think a nation resolved to work out accommodations with the Russians, the Chinese, the Arabs and those Europeans with whom the United States has had a tendency to hicker, would also take the tiny steps required to regularize other quarrels on a miniature scale.

Specifically I have in mind the continuing cold war between the United States and Cubs, which doesn't seem to have much point in an era of relaxing tensions, and the continuing failure to arrange diplomatic relations with those two small but strategically located states, Outer Mongolia and Albania

Cubs is the most crucial of the three nations mentioned because of its relationship to continental America, its Caribbean position and proximity to the Panama Canal, its association with anti-U.S. propaganda and guerrilla movements elsewhere, and its symbolic implication as the locus of the nuclear age's greatest superpower confrontation.

"I think it will require many years before diplomatic relations are restored. I don't think con-ditions exist in the United States that permit positive steps. I believe an improvement of relations must be regarded as a long-term affair."

Yet "many years" have now passed. U.S. relations with vir-"all socialist countries" tually have improved. ART MARKET The Battle Of the Dolls In England

By Souren Melikian

LONDON (IRT) - "Wanted, Lord and Lady Clapham." say the posters dotting England.

Underneath is an explanation: The V&A (Victoria and Albert Museum) needs £16,000 to keep Lord and Lady Clapham in this

The twosome in question are 17th-century dolls, the oldest English dolls in existence. They were anctioned for £16,000 at Sotheby's to a Swiss collector as Nathalie Rothstein, deputy keeper of the V&A textile department, looked helplessly on. She had gone to the sale with $2,000 to

But on June 7, with the backing of V&A lirector Roy Strong. Miss Rothstein persuaded the board that delivers licenses for exporting antiques and works of art to withhold during a three months period a permit to take the dolls out of the country. So far, the V&A has collected £6.050 ($2.050 from small contributors) toward the purchase price. They must come up with the rest of the money before Sept. 7.

The clamor has been such that The Times of London published an appeal, warning readers that if the £16,000 was not raised, the dolls would so to "the American" bidder, a slip that only underscores the importance of the dolls to England.

Child-Proof Pair

"Lord" and "Lady Clapham" were the property for 280 years of an English family with property at Clapham, a London borough. It is probable that a high degree of sophistication saved the dolls from childish vandalism, Dolls do not usually last three

Before seeing the doll, costume historians had to depend on descriptions or inventories, for no coat or waistcoat from the era had survived. The coat itself is lined with pure silk; the handknitted stockings. also of silk, have clocks.

Pointing out the details, Madeleine Ginsburg, senior research assistant in the V&A textiles department, becomes almost lyrical. The shoebuckles, she points out, work—they come undone. The straps over the instep button and

Imported Silk

The Lady Clapham doll is considered even more exciting by Miss Rothstein. It is dressed in imported Chinese silk, one of several details that help pinpoint the pair so closely in time. The use and wear of Chinese and Persian silk was prohibited by a law passed in 1700 under pressure from English manufacturers -which makes it impossible for the doll to have been created after 1700

The coffure is an illustration of French-Inspired fashion in the late 17th century. Women then were wearing their hair curied over the forehead and done up in a bun at the nape of the neck A hatlike device-called a "shoe' in contemporary alang- involv-ing wire wrapped with fine linen held it all in place. This style. called "the laced head." was faishfully rendered by the dollmaker (the doll's hairdo corresponds in every detail with that shown in a French engraving of the period.

Among "Lady Clapham's" accessories is a black mask of the sort that women of her time used to disguise themselves when they went to the theater or other public entertainments. Society was becoming more liberal but not liberal enough for "respectable" women to show their faces at any sort of "daring" public Hence, the masks. But. in 1704, after prostitotes had taken them up, Queen Anne banned them.

How did these dolls survive the centuries? It is hard to believe that young girls could have resisted the temptation of redoing the hair or creating new costumes. Mrs. Giosburg suggests that the dolls were brought out only on Sundays when the daughters of the family had been especially good. It seems likely that the Clapham girls were rarely good-to the greater benefit of generations to come. Only one other doll of the same period is known to exist-it is in the collection of Esther Faurholt in Denmark

But the question remains: Will the Clapham dolls stay in

LONDON THEATER

J. B. Priestley: Nothing Like It Since 'East Lynne'

By John Walker

LONDON, July 12 (IHT).-The moment of truth for the musical "The Good Companions," at Her Majesty's, came during the curtain calls when the small. pudgy, drahly-dressed ligure of J. B. Priestley came on stage with self-deprecatory shuffle.

The audience rose and cheered as well they might, for Mr. Priestley was by far the most charismatic figure we had seen all evening, a person who established an immediate rapport. With one sentence he revealed himself as a quirky individual: "Previn and Mercer have sent me on." he said because I look so shabby and they look so rich."

He thanked the cast for their warmth and zest, hoped that a little of it had been felt by us is little had) and commented on the number of people he had seen crying during tha show. "There's been nothing like it since 'East Lynne'" he said. "But they are not crying for Jess Oakroyd, they are not crying for Miss Trant or Inigo Jollifant. They're crying for an England they've somehow lost."

But what the show gave us was an England that had never been, for it does not more than annex a small part of the territory of the backstage Hollywood musicals-it is "Gypsy" with a North Country accent or a more mature version of one of those Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland efforts in which wide-eyed innocents save the show.

No one could cry over these versions of the familiar characters Oakroyd (John Mills), Jolifant (Christopher Gable) or Miss Trant (Judi Dench)-for none of them, in Ronald Harwood's adaptation of Mr. Priestley's bulky novel, are given an opportunity establish themselves as people an audience can care for, And good companions themselves. the concert party they rescue. blanks, distinguishable from each other only by height and

The show does sometimes succeed as an old-fashloned tearjerker, for the music of Andre Previn and the lyrics of Johnny Mercer combine well to produce a sentimentality that avoids false notes, that is genuine and even moving, Aliss Dench, an extremely fine, touching actress, makes the most of her two ballads, "Dance of Life" and "Darkest Before the Dawn" and also her moment of fluttery confusion when she comes cert party.

Yet the musical is a failurean honorable one, but nonetheless unsuccessful due mainly to the unfocused nature of Mr. Harwood's book and its fidality to the original. There are too many heroes-four figures trying to occupy center stage. "Gypsy," for example, the American classic of this picaresque genre, succeeded by concentrating on the voracious mother willing her daughters to a success she longed for. Here, ating for Miss Trant trying to escape from her middle-class restrictions to Jess Oakroyd secking the social security he has lost, to Inigo Jollifant's aimless wanderings, to Susie Dean's longing for stardom.

At first, as the musical opens with a concert party performance and the entrance of the three outsiders who have been collected together by a gregarious wandering minstrel, Morton Mitchum, I had thought Mr. Harwood had been bold and thrown away half of Mr. Priestley's book. But then the show goes into prolonged flashback to explain in turn how the three came together. It's an exposition that takes up most of the first half and, despite the skill with which it is done, set within a musical framework, it is an essential bore. The second half, when the concert party get their show on the road, is better, taking off with a lively number celebrating the traveling life that has all the ritality-the expression of joy in shared hardships—of Mr. Priestley's novel. But the plot, once filleted, is standard showbiz cliché. This might have been turned to good account—as a similar situation was in "Gypsy"—if Marti Webb's performance as Susie Dean had been hetter. In the musical, she is the girl who goes from obscurity to stardom overnight. Had that also happened in real life, it might have lifted the end of the show which fizzles out in some offhanded last minute pairing-off of the characters. But Miss Webb, though a personable performer. lacks a big voice and her thin tones were overwhelmed by the orchestra John Mills's performance as the hhunt Jess is nicely understated and Christopher Gable can still do an engaging juvenile lead. There's also some good dancing from Ray C. Davis, and two lively cameos from Malcolm Rennie William Relton (Chernbin), Nicola Pagett (Suzanne) (Count as an ebullient ham performe a sort of Donald Wolfit of the banjo-and from John Bardon as a talent scout.

Johnny Mercer's lyrics are clever, full of audacious rhymes, but, as such titles as "Aye, Lad" "Ta, Luv" suggest, he has been carried away by his enthusiasm for an unfamiliar vernacular, determined to show his mastery by cramming in as many typically English expressions as

Mr. Previn's score is excellent, melodic and hummable. There is one number, "Stage Struck," that ts almost certain to end up in the repertoire of those performers, such as Liza Minnelli, who are obsessed by the mystique of show

Braham Murray's direction is fluid and efficient Malcolm Pride's sets suggest much by little means, but his jigsaw patterns merely emphasize that this is a show that does not fit together.

At the National Theatre, Jonathan Miller has attempted to rescue Beaumarchais's "The Marriage of Figuro" from the world of opera, for the play is apparently receiving its first-ever major production in London, although an adapted version had a short run at Covent Garden in 1785. It is odd tha way we treat revolutionary works: Swift's 'Gulliver's Travels" becomes a nursery book, and Beaumarchais provides the basis for the most elite of all forms of art, and one in which Mozart's music added a harmony not to be found in the original.

Not that the critical aspects of the play get much chance to surface in Mr. Miller's production for perhaps taking his cue from Beaumarchais's first profession of clock maker, be turns the work into a mechanical farce in perpetual motion, piling hoary gags on irrelevant business from a servant who screams his one line to a lawyer with a slow motion walk (a joke also used in the National's "Spring: Awakening" where at least it had a dramatic moint! The result is lively but extremely tussy and The play is partly redeemed by cellent as the jealous, morally dublous Count Almaviva as is Genma Jones as a perpetually a nervous smile at inappropriate moments. Nicola Pagett, who seems to have cornered the market in pert servant girls in Mr. Miller's productions, makes an excellent Susanne and Antonia Pemberton, as Figures errent mother, finely delivers a speech on the oppression of women. Gawn Grainger's Figure is somewhat strident, more loud-monthed than vivacious, using his voice like a bludgeon rather than a rapier in his duels of wit.

The production has anesthetizet the pain of the writing, the desperation of the involvements in love—each character wishing fidelity from those they seek to deceive, or seeking solace with others for imagined infidelities of their partners, and also the pas-aion of the attack on authority and privilege, substituting the inferior pleasures of watching a machine in action, the clockwork precision of the plot clarking

What happened?

Time was when art had a distinctive national flavor, communications were slower, cross-polluna-tion more difficult, styles clustered and grew around a few cities and artists from each country had a more or less recognizable accent.

Time was when art meant a single significant work containing its own logic, its own expression and a complex potential of meaningful interrelationships all contained within the narrow limits

Time was when one believed in subjectivity, It was in such a time that the Blennale was conceived and given us perishable form.

National Pavilions

Since then a number of things have changed That artists should represent Sweden or Janan seems today no less absurd than if they were delegated to Venice by the Presbyterian Church or the Foreign Legion, Venice, however, has irredecotably organized the Birtinale area by National Psyllions-self-conscious little buildings scattered among the trees.

Next, when art meant a single significant work, that in turn meant that the dealer must find the single interested buyer. The market was limited. the collectors themselves quite closely involved and informed. There could be no question of "creating be marketed.

Since the end of World War II things have changed a great deal. The Biennale-type shows that are successful today iDocuments, the Biennale de Paris; no longer stress individual works by individual artists and the development to be noted since their last exhibition. They stress some trend, some -ism: photorealism, minimalism, arte povera, etc. The reasons for this are no doubt numerous, but one of them is that any trend can, more easily than a single artist rexcept Picassor, become a standard product which a broader public can theo be made to feel desirable and therefore to buy.

Big shows like Documeota create the market. After the last one-immediately at its inception in fact—the work by Americao photorealists tand others; displayed there doubled in value, And the value kept climbing from day to day. Dealers obviously bave au interest in such a process because the fallout for is it spin-off?) is money in the pocket. You do not only sell these people's paintings, but their prints and ultimately reproductions and books devoted to their work.

'Good' Business

Venice could not provide this 1) pe of service. pose there must be, but not for "Duich art." The window display is all wrong. In any event the Dutch can only send, say, Bram van Velde or any other individual artist, and this will give value only to his own limited production. Bad business. Too much expenditure for too little returns, Gire us blg thematic shows. Good business. Good-bye

Pinally, one used to believe in subjectivity. And creativity. Both of these are today Bourgeois and Reactionary which means that they are Morally Had, Subjective = Bourgeois = Bad is the sort of equation that results not so much from an analysis of the artistic process as it does from a guilty conscience whose feet have gotten tangled in a philosophical and aesthetic manure pile. It is perhaps also the solemn premise of a few very tough thinkers.

The weathervane today points toward Objectivity. That is where the sun rises, and the gloaming subjectivity must be denied or the sun will not rise. This sort of ascetically suicidal self-denial is apparent in a broad range of works that present us with a subjective vacuum, like the photo-realists or are heavy with impersonal intentions like most "political" art.

On the other hand, excessively subjective works on the neurotic fringe of subjectivity, are dremed acceptable because they are so desperately subjective that it is almost impossible to relate to them on any terms but that of a clinical objectivity. They are the drunken helots of "bourgeois subjectivity."

This effacement of subjectivity means that no matter how excessive, extravagant, idiosyncratic a work may be, it is ocver considered to be anythiog but an element in a process, a step in a dialogue whose value is pro memoria and which will immediately be answered by a critical comment which in turn will stimulate the production of another work. II am speaking about avantcarde art, naturally, and that, after all, is what bichnales are about i.

Implications

The stress on objectivity—on the work as object and the artist as a product of surrounding circumstances-implies that the individual work is no longer significant since it derives its significance not from a confrontation with a spectator, but from its relative position in the constellation of other contemporary works and of critical comment.

Here again, Venice is the loser, This form of debate-an artistic dead end, say, because nobody is confronting the crucial issue—cuts across frontlers and cannot be successfully displayed in the

A friend who has read Mcrleau-Ponty with some thoroughness tells me the philosopher's originality -better, his highly contemporary significancederives from the understanding he has reached of the inseparable nature of the objective and the subjective. "Bourgeols idealism" was wholly subjective in its outlook. "Marxist materialism" is resolutely objective. Yet it is impossible actually to flush either of these realities out of the universe. "One cannot see without being seen; one cannot touch without being touched." On such simple terms Merleau-Ponty lass the foundations of a philosophy that may finally embrace these irreconcilable and undeniable realities.

Art, in any event, is wasted energy if it is devoted to refining, endlessly grinding, the objective deterministic structures of experience. It should rather subvert those structures, undermine them by creating forms of expression beyond the grammar of structure.

may have been bourgeois and nationalistic and felt guilty and insecure about both-you may have been "excessively aesthetic" and dogmatic" and "retrogradely official," but when art was something different from what it is today you helped it along-with pomp and snobbery and patronizing airs perhaps, but there was a sense to

"Obviously, therefore, if this in-terval in the first instance could be extended, this perceived danger would be reduced accordingly," he told Mr. Burns.

In a second letter on the same date, Mr. Wriston noted that subsequent conversations with the Fed led him to believe the board did not feel the proposal to posttion date of the notes fully responded to their concern. He noted that the board in-

How State to Benefit

LONDON, July 12 (AP-DJ) .--The Royal Dutch Shell Group said today it does not see how Britain would gain from the government's proposal to acquire a majority interest in oilshore oil operations.

As far as state revenue from the operations is concerned, a spokesman said, the state does not have to take a direct interest in the concessions to increase its take. This can be achieved through the government's as yet unspecified proposals for an additional tax on profits from offshore of operations, the spokesman said.

He also said the gorernment does not need to take a direct interest in concessions to have ocntrol over the North Sea oil operations because existing licensing arrangements already assure the government extensive

Mr Woodcock said to an Interview that the "temporary crisis" in the world auto industry bas made the "primary responsibility" of the German auto maker its own people, "and the business of setting up a new facility in the United States at this time."

Volkswagen, which earlier this week announced a 17.5 per cent drop in world sales, has been considering building an assembly plant in the United States, its most important export market. A decision is empected this fall.

Mr. Woodcock earlier had favored such a move. The Japanese auto makers Toyota and Datsun already have assembly plants in the United States. Mr. Woodcock is in Germany on a week-long tour of auto plants at the invitation of a German metalworkers union.

He said the auto industry is in a termporary crisis not in a "structural crisis." He added that "there is a crisis in the United States and an even worse crisis in Japan . I do believe that, given a year or so, there will be a strong recovery." he said.

Aliens Slow On U.S. Stocks

WASHINGTON, July 12 (AP-DJ1.-Investors abroad slowed their participation in U.S. stock markets in the first quarter of this year, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) reported teday.

Net purchases of U.S. company shares, both preferred and common, by investors abroad amounted lo 5380 million in the January-March months, compared with nearly $1.3 billion in the flist quarter of 1973 and $505 million in the final three months of last year. The SEC said gross purchases of U.S. company stocks by foreign lustitutions and investors amounted to about $2.6 billion in the first quarter of this year. ecmpared with $3.6 billion in the final three mouths of last year and more then $3.8 billion un the first quarter of 1973. Gross sales were more than $2.2 billion of this year, $3.2 billion in the October-December months and nearly $3.6 oillion in the first quarter of last year.

Wholesale Price Rise Slows in U.S.

Index Gains 0.5 % As Food Costs Decline

WASHINGTON, July 12 (AP). -Wholesale farm and food prices fell sharply in June but induktrial prices continued to soar, lilting the wholesale price index 0.5 per cent-the smallest increase in eight mouths.

The June increase, reported to day by the Labor Department, is equivalent to an annual infla-tion rate of 8 per cent.

Although far below the 1.3 per cent rise in May, when prices climbed at a 15.6 per cent annual pace, last month's increase was still high by historical standards. The figures gave further evi-dence that inflation has shifted from the food area into industrial commodities. Economists regard this as a more ominous sign because, unlike farm prices which move up and down, industrial price increases tend to become locked into the economy. They also mean higher retail prices 35.7℃ Surge Industrial prices rose a seasonally-adjusted 2.2 per cent in June following a 2.7 per cent jump in May. These prices have surged at an annual rate of 35.7 per cent in the last three months and were 21.9 per cent higher than a year carlier.

Agricultural prices, on the other hand, have been dropping for the past four months, plunging an adjusted 4 per cent in June to a level 1.2 per cent below a year

Big price declines were posted in June for livestock, off 13.4 per cent; fresh and dried fruits and vegetables, down 13.7 per cent; live poultry, off 9.6 per cent, aud milk, down 7.7 per cent, Grain prices rose 6.6 per cent, the only major farm product to increase in price.

However, the decline in agriculture prices may have passed. Chalrman Herbert Stein of the President's Conneil of Economic Advisers said wholesale form and food prices rose again in July.
Mr. Stein expressed nore coucerr with the rise in Industrial prices which he said "reveals the seriousness of the inflation with which the natiou is conteuding." Wholesale prices in June were 14.5 per cent above a year ogo.

The Labor Department said the overall wholesale price index rose $155.70 to buy the same volume of goods that $100 purchased in

The spokesman confirmed car-lier reports from Washington that the EBC action was simel at heading off possible U.S. pen alty duties on ESC dairy ship ments. Reports from Washington said that if the EEC suspended its dairy export subsidies. Nixon Bd ministration officials would be able to go into federal district court to seek a postpomment of, a court ruling that otherwise might force the U.S. Tressur to start so-called countervalling duty procedures.

EISENHOWER Portrait of the Hero By Peter Lyon. Little, Brown & Co. 839 pp. Illustrated. $15. Reviewed by Drew Middleton

since Dwight D. Eisenhower left the presidency. The anguish of those years prompts many who mocked him when he was in office to recall wistfully that period in the fifties when America enjoyed a reasonable stability, there was confidence in the system and, as the President boasted, no American blood was slied abroad.

A good many writers have puzzled over the enigma that was Gen, Eisenhower in the five rears since his death. Peter Lyon. with the blessing and help of the Eisenhower family, is the latest to attempt this formidable

The result is a very long, very detailed book; facile in explanation of Gen. Eisenhower's character, by turns objective and prejudiced and marred by shoddy writing and a distressing ignorance of military matters. There is a strained quality about the writing, as though the author never decided whether he should be supercilious about "the Hero" or worshiping, arch or scholarly, This reviewer picked it up with happy anticipation and put it down with distaste. Admittedly Gen. Eisenhower is a problem for any biographer. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith discussing his chief at the height of his fame, said, "Nobody really knows Ike." Some thought they did. George S. Patton jr. and Anthony Eden, to name two, and lived to learn how wrong they had been. He would offer everything, judgments, opinions, mem-ories, anecdotes: and yet there was always a feeling that the inner man remained inviolate.

Peter Lyon sees two Eisenhowers, "the public and the prirate... those two quite different, even contradictory inhabitants of the same beguiling fleshly envelope.

The one was the tireless cru-sader for peace, the warm, frank soldier-President. The other was the private Eisenhower professing friendship for the Cuban people and hoping for an understanding with the Castro government on one day and, on the next, ordering the Centra, Intelligence Agency "to organize, arm and train Cuban exiles, looking to-ward a possible armed assault upon the Caribbean island."

We may never know the real Eisenhower. But it is likely that Mr. Lyon's two were one, and that one the retained servant of his country who forgot the golf and the back-slapping when ic-stinct told him his country was in danger.

To many, the most amazing thing about the general was the speed of his rise to military command. The passages that trace the evolution of the young lieutenant into a brigadier general the star of the war plans staff, are among the best in the book. Here are the qualities in Gen. Eisenhower that made him a distinguished commander: the quick absorption of complicated elements in a military situation. the ability to keep in mind scores of the Hero." In one of the of factors affecting that situation, author's phrases, he might have the capacity, at the same time. to see the problem in its essen-

The author is less convincing when he deals with his hero's York Times NATO correspondent.

THIRTEEN years have passed military career as supreme commander. Indeed, it is difficult to take seriously a writer who talks of "pursuit planes," thinks the Flying Fortress was the B-29 and discusses the African campaign of 1942 without mentioning Alamein. Charles de Gaulle in 1943 was not a "relatively obscure French general." He had been deputy minister of war in the Reynaud government and the leader of the Free French for two years; in short, a man probably hetter known to the world than Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It is depressing to find Peter Lyon buying all the old wartime myths.

To cite only one: the conten-tion that the British opposed and impeded the invasion of Normandy. The author is sure they did. How then to explain the view of Kent Roberts Greenfield. one of the most distinguished of American official historians, that "it can be plausibly argued that was the British (and Mr. Roosevelt) who are to be credited with the realistic approach to OVERLORD that insured its SUCCESS."

Mr. Lyon also accepts the view that a landing in France might have been successful two years earlier. The losses in Normandy were heavy enough. What would they have been in 1942 before the longer-range American and British fighters were produced and when the German Army was relatively undrained by the losses in Pussla? Gen Eisenhower's relations with his subordinates, Mont-comery, principally, and his po-lideal and military masters, Roosevelt and Marshall, Churchill and Brooke, are treated ex-haustively. But the vision is narrow. The author seldom tries to stand above those fierce debates and see the war as a whole or to speculate on what could have happened had alternative strategies been chosen. Gen. Eisenhower's trials and achievements as President were largely in the field of international affairs. Here again the author's prejudices intervene; he clearly does not understand Stalin and his Russia; there is more than a whiff of the New Historians of the Left in his approach to the Guatemala, Cuba, Indochina, Quemoy and Matsu, Suez. Lebanon the U-2 incident the summit conferences, all pass in review. The judgments come thick and fast: Gen. Eisenhower took the first step on the long road to the Vietnam war; in Guatemala as in Cuba, he talked peace and thought of war: he was slow to appreciate what the British. French and Israelis were up to over Succ (there is much truth to this), he was fuddled and foolish over the U-2 incident.

"The hero" gets the blame, "First and last the foreign policy of the United States so widely attributed to Dulles, bore the stamp of Dwight Essenhower. And it was not a rubber stamp. The book is subtitled "Portrait chosen a less

An indication of Axius's ability was evident by the sparkling workout he turned in yesterday.

No official time was given, but observers insisted that Axius stepped along at "about 2:34"—the clocking that is expected to be recorded by the winner of the 1-1/4-mile event. Axius is one of a pair of horses that will represent France in the International which will be held for the 16th time. His compatriot is Amyot, owned by Paul Buquet. Like Artis, Amyot has been work-ing out "sensationally," according to stable talk, and it is likely that he will be the second choice to Delmonics Hanover.

The race will have nine starters, with five countries represent-ed Besides France, the countries with two representatives are Sweden, with Line Rodney and Knabe; Canada, with Keystone Gary and Elesnar, and the United States, which, in addition to Delmonica, will be represented by Savoir Only Italy, with Dosson, will have a single representative. one-putt green.

Player also blamed poor putting for his decline. "I hit the ball as well as ever, but I just could not putt," he said.

Aggression Control Oosterhuis, who gave up six strokes to par, including a double bogey at the 15th, against four hirdies, said, "I just backed my way around. I've got to control my aggression."

Of the 17 Americans who started the round, 15 still were in contention when the cut was made at 231 for the low 60. Gene Littler and Dewitt Weaver joined Nicklaus as the only other men to break per with 70s, which left them at 223.

San Diego Is Buttering Its Fans With Bread

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, July 12 (NYT). -Baseball's first scheduled Scramble for Scratch comes off tonight in San Diego. The men who own baseball and the men who play it have been openly lusting after loot since the Cincinnati Red Stockings converted a game for boys into a vehicle for profit more than a century ago, but never until now have fans been invited to share in the swag. When the Padres open a home stand against the Montreal Expos tonight before a crowd that will set an all-time attendance record for San Diego, 20 customers selected by lot will be ushered on the field, furnished with shopping bags and turned loose to fill the sacks with dollar bills. The Padres' benevolent management will scatter $10,000 in play money over the diamood, and the chosen 20 will get two minutes to scoop up what they can while security forces endeavor to prevent their being joined by, say, 25,000 others. The bogus bank ootes will be redeemed in real money, dollar for dollar, and survivors of the scramble, if any, will be paid off by check to avert muggings on the way home.

Fan Appreciation This is Ray Kroc's version of the old baseball promotion known as Fan Appreciation Night. It is his way of thanking the clients who are converting one of the industry's shakiest franchises seems out of character for the owner of a ballcluh to enclose 10 hig ones in a bread-and-butter letter to the customers, well, Ray Kroc is a new boy with a lot to learn. Give him time, and he may acquire a reverence for the dollar worthy of Calvin Griffith, Charlie Finley or eveo Walter O'Malley.

The first half of the baseball season has had its full share of drama-Henry Aaron heating Babe Ruth's lifetime home - run record; the gaudy results Gay-lord Perry got with his drip-dry delivery, which fell only one short of the American League record for consecutive victories; the unfinished run of 11 straight defeats by the Angels, signaling Dick Williams's triumphal return to the game. These are matters of note, yet nooe has greater significance than the remarkable San Diego story.

This is the town's sixth season of major league ball. Through its first five years, the franchise was a sickly child, a hollow-eyed invalid plucking feverishly at the coverlet. Indeed, more than a year ago its life was despaired of, the orphan was put out for adoption in Washington, where many of California's rejects eventually land. Then came the emotional curtain scene with Ray Kroc stepping out of the wings to claim the foundling as his

Kroc is a hamburger king who happens to be holding $500 million. Mere propinquity to that bankroll cured the Padres' allments. Several teams, like the league-leading Dodgers and Cincinnati's defending champions of the West, have outdrawn San Diego, but nowhere is there a healthier franchise than in the town baseball was about to aban-

When the Padres finished their last home stand, they were 4,066 short of their all-time top gate for a full season—the 644,272 they drew in 1972. They would break that record tomorrow with a girls' softball team, and the chances are they will finish with a season attendance of something like 1.1 million.

Title Dates Changed TOKYO, July 12 (Reuters).

Two world boxing title fights scheduled in Japan next week have been postponed, the promoters said Wednesday. World Boxing Association junior welterweight champion Antonio Cervantes of Colombia will now defend his title in Tokyo on Sept. 3 instead of July 16 against Japanese challenger Yasuaki Kadots. WBA flyweight champion Chartchai Chionol of Thailand will defend his title against Susumu Hanagata of Japan in Yokohama, near Tokyo, on Oct. is instead of July 19.

not noted as quick studies, but even they should be able to spell out the handwriting on this wall. When business languishes, it isn't necessarily the community's fault and the solution is to fold the winning team immediately, The Padres are still in last place, farther off the pace than any other team, but they are no

Nixon's Travel Plans

WASHINGTON.—President Nixon's game plan for the summer is to stay out of Washington as much as he can. After the Middle East and the Soviet Union he went to Key Biscayne, Fls. Then he stopped in Washington to feed the dog and went out to San Clemente

After San Clemente he expects to go to Japan. After Japan it's anyhody's guess. Buchwald "Ron get me Henry on the phone." "Yes sir. Mr. President. Henry's in Rio de Janeiro watching the world champion wrestling "Well, get him for me any-

₩8..." "Here he is. Mr. President." "Henry, this is the President.

Have you given any more thought to where I can go after Japan? ... Hmmmn, you think New Guinea?... No, I've never been to New Guinea, I'd like that very much... Shall we offer them a reactor?... You think they'd settle for a plain kerosene generator?... Good, I'll order one

"Okay, so we go to New Guinea Where else?... Borneo?... Why am I going to Borneo?... Salt talks... I see. Borneo has the best salt mines in the Far East ... You figure if we can't make a SALT treaty with the Soviet Union we can make one with Indonesia? ... That's using the old head, Henry... OK, that takes me into September. What ... What's that? ... I could take a 90-day cruise on a French liner?... I know the food is delicious Henry, but how do I justify taking a croise at that time ... to visit Hong Konz and encourage trade with the United States? ... Ron says it will play in Peoria... What do I do after the cruisc? ... You want me to climb Mount Everest?

"Let one ask you this, Henry. Why would I want to climb Mount Everest? ... To he the first President of the United States ever to hold a summit talk on a summit?

I like it... All right, we're into the spring. .. What do I do then? .. I go back to Washington? ... What on earth for? Henry, you know I hate Washington .. Well, wouldn't you hate Washington if they were saying all those terrible things about you? . . . They're saying them about you, too? ... know, Henry, I'm sorry... OK, you think I should go back to Washington for a week, just so people will feel I'm working on the domestic problems of the country.... But I'm warning you Henry, I'm not going to stay for the weekend.

"Where do I go after the week in Washington? ... You think you can get me on the film festival jury in Cannes? ... Will they be showing 'Patton'?... Oh, that's too bad... No, don't refuse it... I'll take Pat and the kids... Is there any country close to Cannes where I can stop off for a rest?... Spain?... That's a per-fect idea. Tha Spanish have always liked me and I think Franco will go all-out to see we have a good reception .. To make sure, I'll give him a fleet of helicop-

"Nnw we have to think about next summer... What about going hack to Russia?... We can't do it? It's Brezhnev's turn to visit the United States? ... Does that mean I have to come back to Washington next summer? ... Oh, Henry, is there sny way we can get out of it? ... Maybe we could leave a note for him and tell him Pat and I had to go to Peking? ... You don't think that would work? ... All right, I'll come back for the meeting, but he'd better make it short.

"Look, this call is costing money. . When will I see you? After the world wrestling champlonships, you're going to Spoleto for the concerts? ... I see, and then the horse show in Ireland? ... Right, I got you ... and then the Tunisian tennis finals, and after that you're going to tha sled dog races in Alaska?... You have a pretty exciting summer ahead of you... Listen, if you're ever in Washington, I'll give you my number.... I may not be here, but the answering service will always know where I am ... Yes, I'll tell Nancy you're fine, Goodbye, Henry, and don't forget to Saturdays, he made parachute jumps over Harlem, always with a sponsor, whose product he would advertise, once playing the saxophone, and once landing atop the 123d Street police station.

The Black Eagle: Flier, Soldier of Fortune

By Lee Dembart

NEW YORK (NYT).-Fifty years ago this month, Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, the Black Eagle of Harlem, took nff from the Harlem River to the cheers of thousands on what was billed as a flight to Ethiopia.

Although he crashed five minutes later in Flushing Bay when a pontoon fell off his scaplane, the stunt established him as a hero in the minds of hlack people, and he has remained one in folklore. At a time when hlack men could hold few aspirations, he not only aspired, but did.

Now 77 years nid, though he looks half that age, Col. Julian reminisced this week on a career of derring-do during which he has been a pioneer hlack aviator, stunt parachutist, soldier of fortune and, most recently, international dealer. Controversy has surrounded him wherever he has gone, whether commanding Emperor Haile Selessie's air force (the Emperor commissioned him a colonel), flying for the Finns against the Russians in 1940 nr shipping arms to Guatemala or Hait! or the regime of Moise Tshombe in Katanga, for which the United Nations expelled him from the Congo.

Parachuting

Col. Julian has not flown an airplane in nearly 30 years. But in an Oxford accept that is sometimes overcome by his West Indian birth, he spoke animatedly of the 1920s, when he made his living by parachuting at $1,500 a jump.

"One time in Atlantic City I was to land on the beach," he recalled. 'The wind was hlowing to shore, so we took the plane over the water to allow it to blow me back.

When I got within a thousand feet of the seashore, then the wind becalmed. I was wearing a full uniform, including boots, you understand. But I'm no Weismuller. I held my parachnte in my teeth and divested myself of everything except my shorts. Then my shorts blew off.

You talk about streaking," he said, chortling. "Well, sir. that was the first serial streak. I could hear the women shrieking. Yes, that was the first aerial streek."

Saturdays he made parachute jumps over Harlem, always with a sponsor, whose product he would advertise, once playing the saxophone, and once landing atop the 123d Street police station, where his equipment dangling over the side broks a

English Mother

The things I would have been able to accomplish had I not been a Negro," he said. "I wish I would have come into the world looking like my mother, who was English, rather than my father. I would not have had to surmount the insurmountable obstacles.

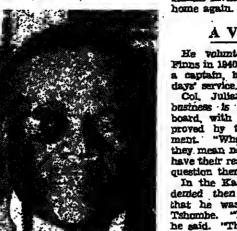

"I never thought I would live to see the day when a black man would rise to the level of lieutenant general in the United States Air Force. We have Negroes now who are flying for airlines, where then they couldn't even wash the planes." Col. Julian and his wife, Essie, celebrated their 47th anniversary two weeks ago. They live in a house in the Bronx with a statue of a black eagle over the door. The living room is cluttered with memorahilia. Luncheon in the chandeliered dining room is a four-course affair, with Cornish hens and veal, four vegetables and a 1939 Pinot Noir served in cut crystal. A housekeeper, two Angora cats and a parrot round out the household.

Col. Julian, who still sports a monocle, neither snokes nor drinks and the only water he will take to his lips is bottled spring water.

Legendary Wardrobe

His wardrobe has always been legendary: custom-made ailk shirts, stiff collars, hundreds of neckties, "A gentleman must have at least 150 suits," he said in the interview. "With vests." Time has not dimmed his spirit or his flesh, hat it has expanded his girth and his-memory. His recollection of events differs from all other accounts of them, which differ from each other.

Hubert Fauntleroy Julian

Consider the flight to Ethiopia. Twenty-five thousand people turned out on July 4, 1934, to see him take off on the first leg. They paid $1 spiece. Col. Julian says a pontoon was damaged as the plane was pushed into the water, but be could not postpone the flight. Contemporary newspaper

Neither does his authorized biography. The Black Eagle, by John Peer Nugent (Stein and Day, Bantam paperback). Haile Selassie sent for Mr. Julian to head his air force in 1930, but after the colone crashed the Lion of Judan's favorite airplane at the dress rehearsal for his coronation. the Emperor sent him home. The colonel went back after the

A Volunteer

Italian invasion, but then came

He volunteered to aid the Finns in 1940, was commissioned a captain, but left after four days service.

Col. Julian says his arms business is completely aboveboard, with all shipments approved by the State Department. "When they say 'No, they mean no." he said. "They have their reasons, and we don't. question them."

In the Katanga business, he demed then and denies now that he was selling arms to Tshombe. "That was a fake." he said. "The UN came pretty near to be dissolved on account of the interference in the Congo." He insists he was bringing in hospital equipment. More recent arms dealing he will not talk about preferring to remember his early days inaviation. "I can only close my eyes and live in the past," he said. "I live in those dreams.

"I wish my people had given me the recognition and respect I received from the Nordics in "There's one thing, I can go to my grave in peace. To know that I personally got Negroes "So what more do I want for a poor black boy? I've dined with kings, but I've not lost the common touch."

Glenn Miller Fans May Have Spotted Plane

A group of Glean Miller fans ministration, a House agriculture think they have found the wreck subcommittee approved a resoluof the U.S. Air Force plane in which the bandleader disappeared during World War II.

John Edwards, 34, an amateur flier and Miller fan, says that the wreckage in the English Channel "answers the description of Mil-1 -'s Norseman plane and it is in the right position." On Friday, in London, he showed newsmen a sonar photo of a plane wreck, 200 feet under water, 12 1/2 miles southeast of the coastal town of Dymchurch. Miller, America's top bandleader at the time, disappeared with two others on Dec. 15, 1944, on a flight to France where he was to play a Christmas Day concert for GIs. Allegations have been made that his unarmed, single-engined plane was shot down by mistake by an Allied fighter and the alfair hushed up.

That's why Edwards and other members of the 2,000-member

Glenn Miller Society hope to make a positive identification and bring the plane to the surface next year. Edwards thinks that Miller's plane probably crashed because of carburetor icing. But "I like Miller's music and I hate mys-teries"—so it's on with the salvage operation.

A West Berlin court ruled this week that a black actor can play Stanley Kowalski in Ten-Williams's "A Streetcar Named Desire If he wears makeup to make him appear white. Williams's German agents had secured an injunction to prevent Günter Kanimann from playing the part in a production at the Freie Volksbihne Theater in West Berlin. The court okayed the black actor in return for a promise from theater director Charles Lang that he would not stray from the original play. Lang had wanted to change the rape scene in the final act to a seduc-
